Dear Margie,
Remember last September 2, 1970 when, after the picnic you came over to the picnic table Nadine & I were at and said "Hi Boys"? And I was getting sick & those guys in the car came around & one said "We know - this Friday". That guy had on a yellow shirt & jeans. The next day just before school you and Carol walked by from the bus & actually remembered my name then & thought your name was something like Mara. I guess it's been a long time since then. How about on last Feb. 17 & you sat next to me during the assembly Mary Ann put on & talcument on & simply missed my free throw & all the points to get that radio. The Mountie pajama recital to be on the air, or when you get the part. Such fun. This has been a perfectly weird year & I hope to see you next year. Behave yourself this summer. Love, Colleen '74"

Margie,
I hope you enjoy the Maurite as much as I have these last 4 years.

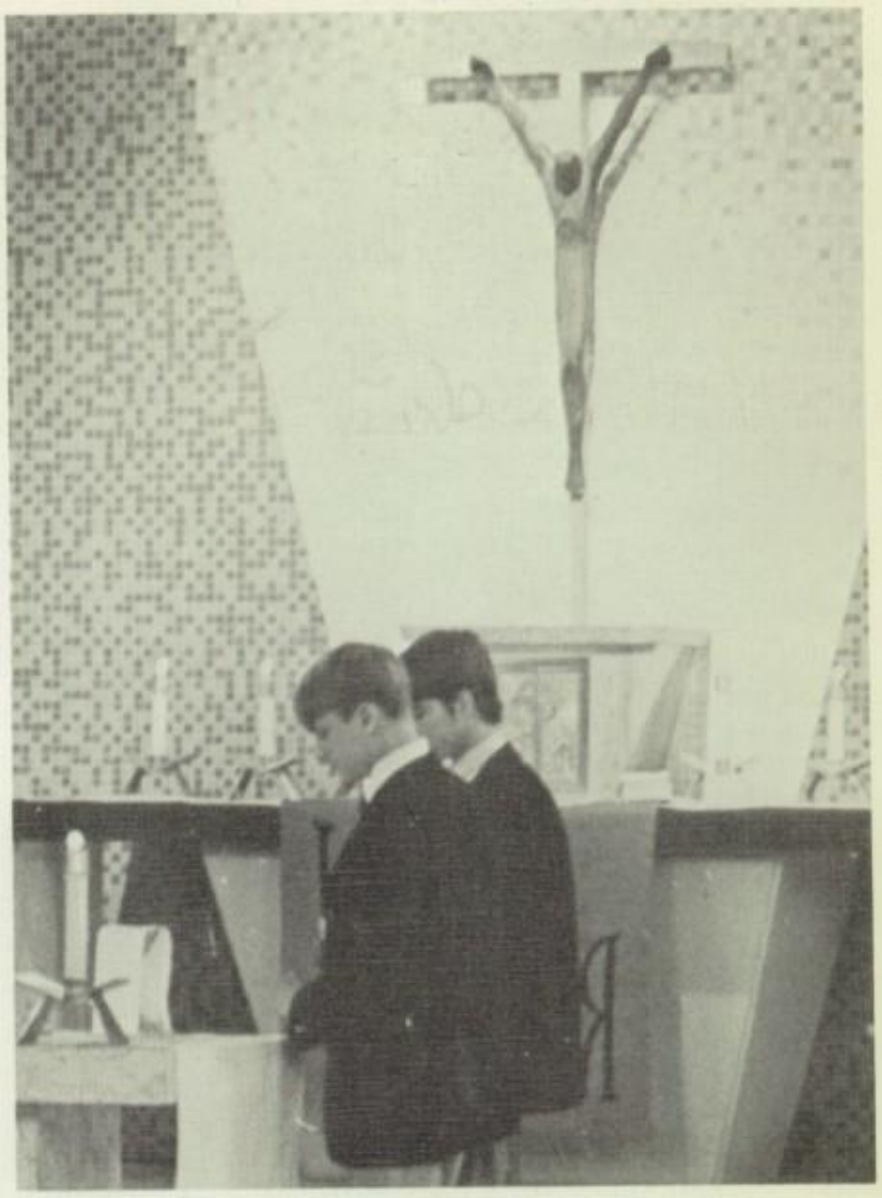
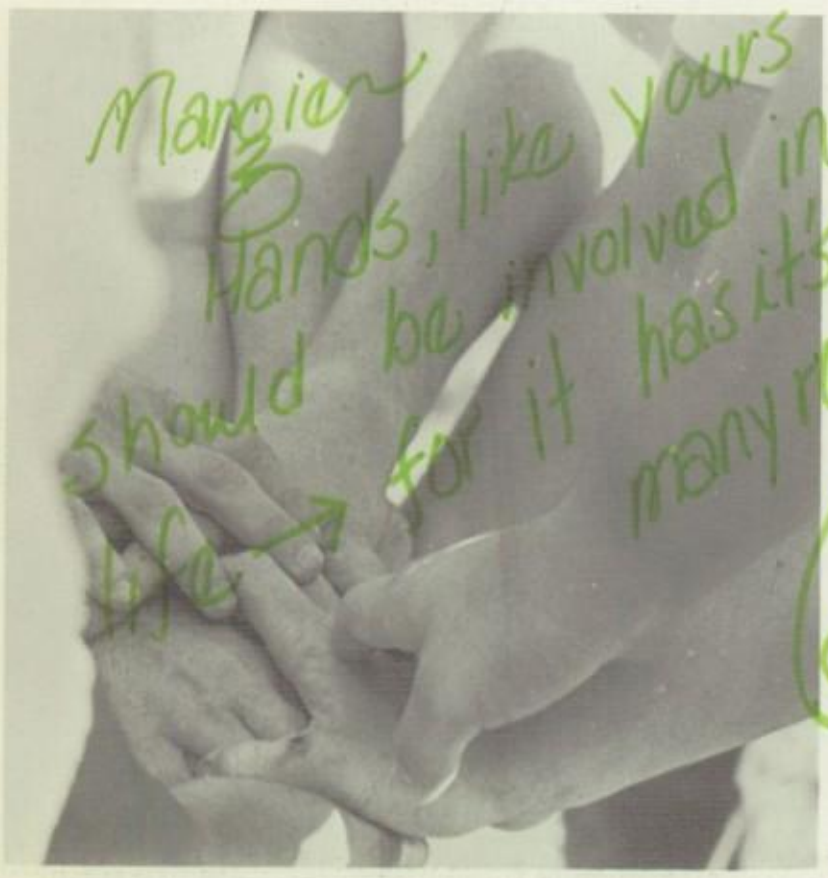
dedication



Maur Hill, with its gymnasiums and dormitories, its classrooms and chapel, in short, the buildings on campus, will devote the largest part of this book. But that is not the main purpose of "The Maurite" or its chief concern . . .



. . . The theme is that of the individual student, symbolized on the cover by the lone Raven. It is at this point, a student's life can only be expressed as a stage of transition.

His dreams have shed the figment of childhood imagination but they have not yet attained the responsibilities of adulthood.

The Maur Hill student, along with hope, still has a choice of opportunities, where his decisions become more realistic than those of dreams.

Maur Hill is more than a school of learning. It is a place for students from many lands with their own dreams and individual abilities. It is a place where these dreams become possibilities, and abilities, realities.

This book is a journal of these individuals at Maur Hill.

Who are these men and women, the faculty? Who can say? Each one is an unique individual, yet they are grouped into the word "faculty."

What makes this "man behind the desk," the man who is often the subject of complaint, yet maintains an air of respect?

He certainly is an intregal part of The Mount and Maur Hill, not only teaching, but also serving as an aid in campus living. Perhaps it is their mere presence on campus or their own offering of school spirit. For each teacher serves as a guiding light in the world of the students. Any one may be chosen by a student to be a help with their personal problems.

So, unknowingly, each student places his trust in the hands of a particular faculty member and each instructor makes that student part of his responsibility, and even more, a part of his life.

Mike Murphy, founder of the League of St. Maur and a member of the board of directors, chats with Jim Clements at the Chicago party.

The League of St. Maur, founded by Michael Murphy, was organized on the principle of promoting the education of youth at Maur Hill.

Members of the League of St. Maur give financial assistance to Maur Hill and also experienced counseling. All members are honorary directors of the school.

Father Edwin, Headmaster, also serves as Chaplain of the League.

As students of Maur Hill, we should be very proud of this organization that keeps guard on the school's needs.

Father Barnabas, Mrs. Kauffman and Mrs. Murphy listen to friend at the Chicago party.

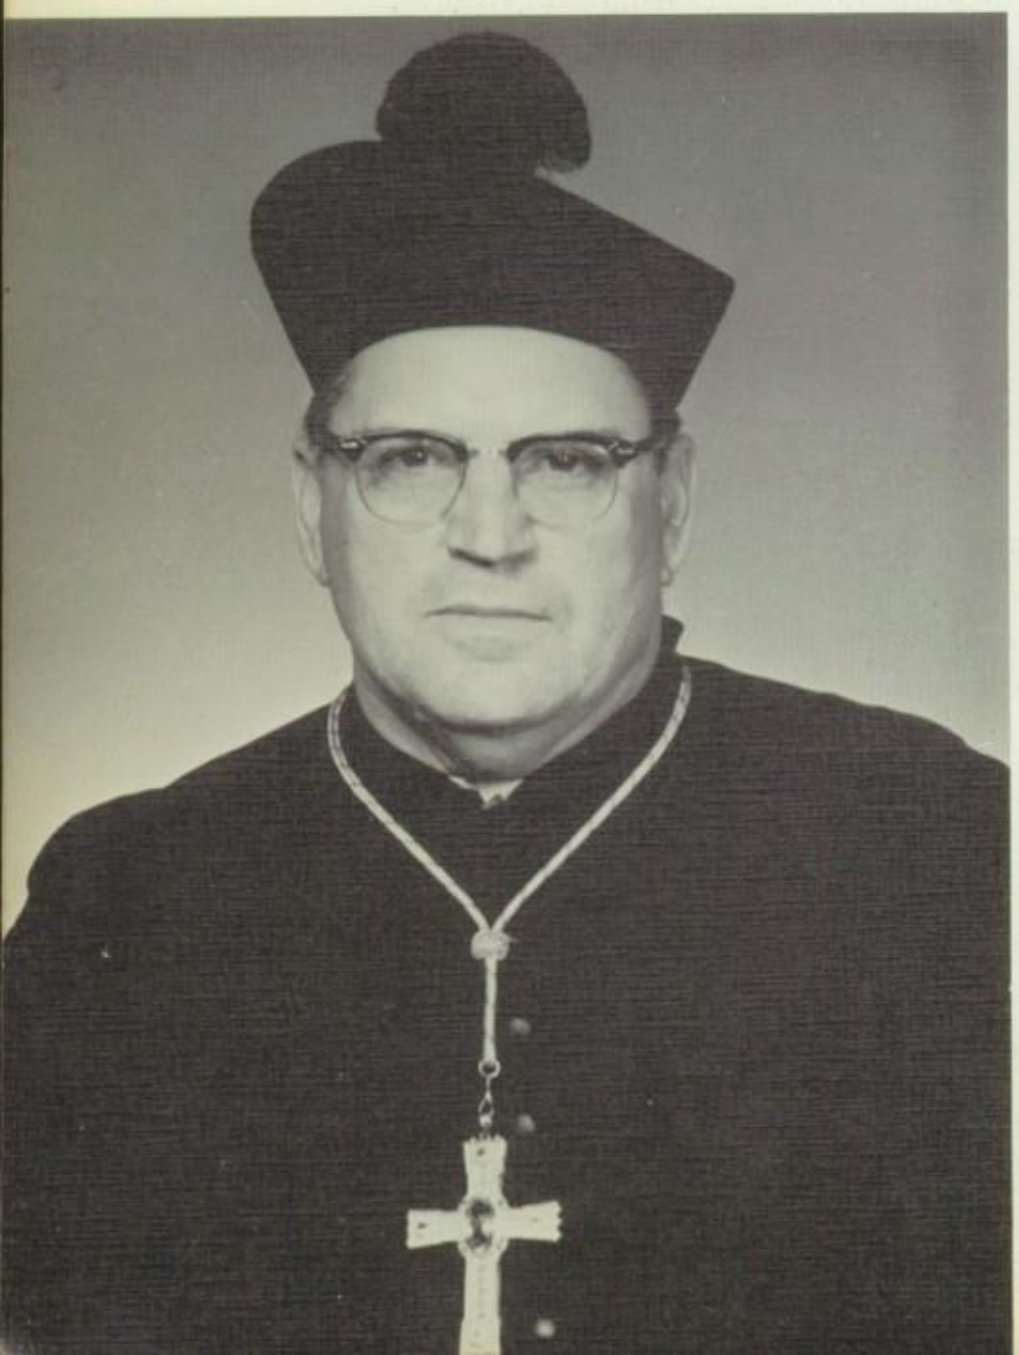
The administration had few changes this year. Mr. Stork and Father Barnabas remained in command. They both had open minds when students brought problems to them and they gave their very honest opinion to the individual student. Father Edwin was still out on fund raising drives to raise money for the new dorms and other unpaid bills.

Ninth hours and work details remained in common use throughout the year, as students would occasionally forget to do their assignments and as average students they do get into some mischief. Father Barnabas is still in charge of boarder students discipline and academic problems. Mr. Stork aided Mr. Galley in helping seniors choose their future colleges and professions.

Father Edwin Watson, headmaster and president



A schools administration is something that few students come in contact with or have a real chance to understand. It is the force that keeps things running and allows the students to get the proper education they need. An administrators' job is so complex that some students find it hard to comprehend. With out them the school would be nothing so lets work together with them, and make our school one of the best.

math

Father Gabriel sees what it's like on the other side.

The Math department was well rounded this year with only three teachers. Mr. Andra taught Algebra 1A, Advanced Algebra A and B, Business Math, and Analysis. Fr. Paul explained how Algebra B and C and Algebra 2C work. At the same time Fr. Gabriel was trying very hard to teach Geometry A and B to the Sophomores. These three teachers were really loaded with the classes this year, but they pulled it out in good shape.

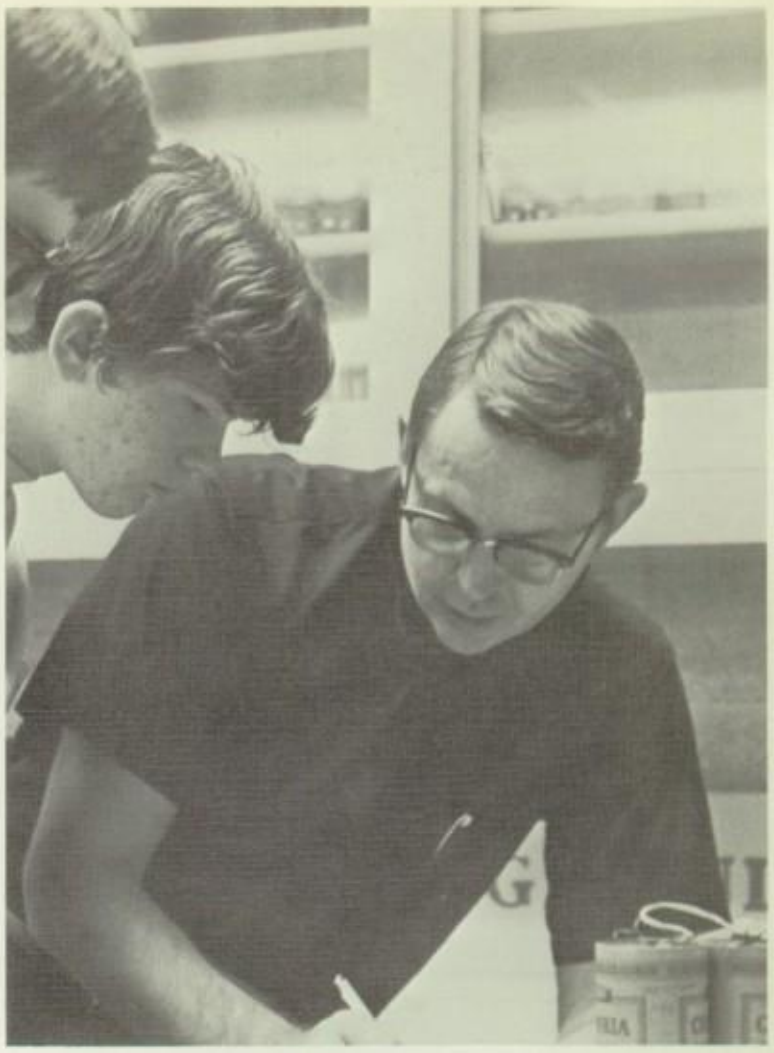
science



"Father Gabriel, writing on the lab table!?!" (Father Gabriel and Tom Webber)

With the change in classes to the modular system the science department profited greatly. The new system enabled Maur Hill's scientific students to take greater advantage of the exciting courses offered.

Fr. Gabriel filled Physics A and B students with knowledge, while Fr. Bruce experimented with Maurite chemists. Mr. Smith took on Physical Science A, B and C as well as Biology B and C. Mr. Galley taught Physical and Mental health. Mr. Stork took time out from his other duties and taught Biology A and Psychology.

Father Roger still maintains his high status as alumni director. He is a very active member of the Atchison County Historical Society. english

The English teachers of this year were brought into a new setting. Mr. Ramsey formally a Mount teacher switched sides and taught a good percentage of our English courses. Fr. Benedict now a resident of the campus, teaches the rest of the English classes for the American students. Miss Palumbo rounds out the English department by teaching the foreign students English.

Fr. Benedict accepts the idea.

Mr. Ramsey rapping with the guys.

Language appeared to be a very specified and challenging course this year, as Father Bruse Swift, French instructor, taught the "elite" language to only four students in French I. Early evening study hall hours occupied the time of eight French II students during night classes.

Father Martin Taylor, Dean of Foreign Students, also was head of the English as a Foreign Language Department. Another instructor, assisting Father Martin was Miss Mary Jane Palumbo. Father Martin also teaches Spanish I.

Latin I, II, and III were taught by Father Owen Purcell. Father Owen is recognized as an expert scholar of the classics.

The art Department, with Father Luke Wenzl as its head, taught art I, II, III.

During the year the young artists worked with ceramics, balsa wood and wood working, serigraphy, oil and acribics, plaster, water colors, and sculptoring.

Father Luke helped his students and patiently encouraged many to show their true creative nature.

Perhaps the most personal department at Maur Hill wouldbe "Guidance."

Although, in actuality each faculty member is called upon at one time or another to help a student with his problems and future plans, the men of the Guidance Department are specially trained and have many resources and much information to help direct a student's needs.

personnel

Perhaps the two Maur Hill personnel best known by the students are Mrs. Wyatt in the Roost and Mr. Pickman in St. Leo's dormitory.

Mrs. Wyatt spends many long hours in the Maur Hill Roost, cooking and often patiently waiting for a confused Maurite to make his decision on what to buy.

Mr. Pickman, who is a great friend to all the junior and senior boarding students, spends most of his time working to insure the running order of the dormitory.

The new Mount academic building has been a special challenge to the administration and faculty. From moving time in August until graduation day the traditional ways of doing things had to be met by creative thinking and management on the part of those whose dedication and concern set new patterns for the years ahead. Initiating a hot lunch program and experimenting with a different type of grading system gave evidence that the old was making way for the new. Twenty-one faculty members joined forces to make the school term memorable in the lives of two-hundred forty students.

Activities is said to be a form of organized, supervised and often extracurricular reaction such as athletic games, dramatics, or dancing. Whether it be a play, pep rally, dance, or an intramural football game, they all make up the year activities at Maur Hill. Activities, formal and informal, play an important part in getting the students to work and play together. Informal activities such as intramural football, basketball and softball, pep rallies, and dances create a free atmosphere between the students that makes every student feel as though they are a part of Maur Hill. Formal activities such as homecoming dance, prom, or a play require a lot of work and patience of the people involved. Activities do play an important role in forming a year at Maur Hill.

The cheerleaders did their regular fantastic job of supporting the Maur Hill athletic teams this year. I don't think there is an athlete or fan who will deny this. They don't get much publicity, and are usually thought of as "unsung heroines."

Very often, it's their cheering that makes the difference in a tight game. To coin a phrase, they mirrored the thrill of victory, and the agony of defeat. It seemed like they never lost their spark even when the chips were down. They worked extremely hard to mold themselves into a team, and from an observer's point of view, they met with great success.

We had wonderful support from them this year, and we only wish there was a more appropriate way to show our gratitude.

To produce a yearbook takes more work and desire than most people can imagine. Hours of work are put into it, to make it something people will enjoy and so it will also have some historical value to the students in the future. The most surprising thing about a yearbook is that the people who make it only want others to appreciate it. This makes all their time and work put into it very worth while.

With a lot of work and time applied this year by the Mount and Maur Hill choruses, they were able to give a good showing at the Miege music day. And this is a goal worth working for.

"More strange than true: I never may believe these antique fables, nor these fairy toys. Lovers and madmen have such seething brains, such shaping fantasies, that apprehend more than cool reason ever comprehends. The lunatic, the lover and the poet are of imagination all compact: one sees more devils than vast hell can hold, that is, the madman: the lover, all as frantic, sees Helen's beauty in a brow of Egypt: the poets eye, in a fine frenzy rolling, doth glance from heaven to earth, from earth to heaven; and as imagination bodies forth the forms of things unknown, the poet's pen turns them to shapes, and gives to airy nothing a local habitation and a name."

One of the most important factors in schools such as Maur Hill and the Mount is an organization that can unite and express the students ideas and needs.

The reason for the existance of such an organization is to bring the students and faculty together to talk calmly the problems of the school in general.

This year the student council had a rough job trying to unite and join the two schools on the same campus.

To paraphrase the Scripture "The Maurite does not live by studies alone." Sports from football to golf and track, intramural and inter-scholastic, provided an important and necessary ingredient for that potent potion -- a Maur Hill year. Football started on a humid day of Aug. 24 and ended in the cold days of November. The sweat of the football players mixed with the enthusiasm of the student body equaled a spirit that was unbeatable which helped bring about a winning season.

After the cleats were packed away the spirit moved to the rubber soles of basketball. New faces appeared with the old ones and the team was on the move. "Work together, work as a team," were the words pounded into the Maurites which added to the suspence of the crowd.

Such teamwork is not apparent in the world of golf and track. These two sports showed the Maurite competing both with himself and members of other schools. Many medals gave proof of an outlet for spirit. And spirit we had.

SPORTS

varsity football 1970

It all started in August with the temperature about 105 degrees. The afternoon sessions were begun with several warm up laps. As the afternoon progressed the beads of sweat were visible, but not a word of complaint came from the team members. The agony was held in during the wind sprints, and everybody gave it all they had. The season record shows they gave 100 percent for many a game were won in the last quarters. They were willing to endure it all until they achieved the goal they had set, a winning season for the 1970 Maur Hill Ravens.

Though no one thought the junior varsity would succeed this year, they proved them wrong by going undefeated. The team had a final record of 7-0. They will be left to carry on the spirit of all the past teams who have worked hard to make an outstanding name for the school.

The freshman football team held a 2-4 record this year. It is not a very impressive record, but that flicker of Maur Hill spirit is starting to really show within this group of young men. It was a tough start, but they stuck it out and proved that they will not give up. Our hopes are that they can keep this spirit and expand on it in the years to come.

Rating as high as third in the state after beating Marysville, the Maur Hill varsity basketball team tried to capture the Tongonoxie Tournament, ending with 3rd place.

In the beginning of the basketball season, it seemed to be a sequal to football. However, as the season progressed and losses began to appear fans and players approached the opposition with a great deal more caution.

Joe LeCluyse puts another one up for the Baby Ravens.

The freshman basketball season like the football season has been one of disappointment on the scoreboard. The freshmen wanted to put together a good team and although they started off on the wrong foot, they fought back with spirit and determination that is a trade mark at Maur Hill.

Many of their loses by three or fewer points. This means that they are still unsure of themselves but by their senior year they should have the confidence and poise to put together a fine basketball team.

All right ten 330's lets get going. This is what the track members heard many times during the season. The members of the team worked hard all year and it paid off in the end. Members of the team this year set four records. For the first time in it's history the Maur Hill track team won the Effingham Invitational. The team also had four of it's members participate in the state track meet. The 880 yard relay took fourth in the state with a time of 1:31.8 which put them in the top ten of the state. The members of this state track team are Rick Beien, Stan Sonomoser, Ed Lutz and Rich Arensberg.

Due to the Mounts use of the old gym, the games were on a moments notice, but Father Barnabas's ability to organize prevailed. The competition was much stiffer than in previous years. It went so far as the Adams Family, one of the tougher teams in the A league, challenged the Jr. Varsity to a game of which nothing came about. This gives an idea of the type of spirit which prevailed in intramurals this year.

This year's senior class returned with its unity and leadership abilities in full blossom. They applied themselves from the first of the year by making a success out of the Big Brother program. They showed their leadership workmanship on the football field by putting it all together and coming up with a victorious season. The yearbook staff consisting of all seniors worked in an orderly and united fashion with the end results being that of a triumphant yearbook.

All in all the senior class has shown an unsurpassed leadership capability in the past four years. We hope that the seniors have set an example for the undergraduates that they to, may lead this school in the future years of Maur Hill.

This year's Seniors were a group of men united with spirit and unity in almost anything they did.

The class of seventy-one was a class consisting of a group of guys who worked hard in both academic and extra-curricular activities. They had their ups and downs but came out alright, mainly because of the great leadership qualities that most of the seventy-one Seniors had. This leadership was show in the athletic fields and in the classroom.

This spirit of the class of seventy-one was instilled into the rest of the student-body and hopefully this spirit will be carried on for years to come.

The senior class is more energetic than many past classes. This is shown by the way all varsity sports are filled with more seniors than any other class. And most of these seniors are finishing their fourth year in the sport. Even the non-varsity seniors participate in all the intramurals. Seniors led the way in football, basketball and baseball.

One memorable sideline activity in which the seniors participated was the famous Southern revival, where the Southerners(seniors) challenged the other three classes to a fight in the snow. History repeated itself with another Bull Run.

Every senior class hopes through its influence to leave some specific accomplishments by which it will be remembered by the classes of succeeding years. Whether it be winning a Mall decoration project, attaining recognition in scientific endeavors, placing first in a speech contest, or receiving a citation of excellence in a choral demonstration, each class leaves memories of its own. But the class of 1971 is unique. It will always be remembered as the first to graduate from the new Mount academy.

Perhaps the main goal of the underclassman is to be the "big senior". This depends on how well he spends his underclassman years.

Making a great senior class is not only determined by studies and athletics, for it is in these years that underclassman will develop the responsibilities, spirit, and friendship that will determine it's success.

The uniting of the Mount and Maur Hill as co-institutional schools will hopefully increase the potential of the underclassman.

Mount Saint Scholastica now has their own academic building and Maur Hill has constructed two modern dormitories. It is up to the underclassman to preserve the good traditions of the old Maur Hill and Mount. But they will be expected to reach great heights in establishing new and better concepts in the private school system.

This year, the junior class is the smallest of the four classes at Maur Hill. Yet, this does not limit their involvement of school activities.

Whether it be the cross country team, the set crew in dramatics, or any other organization, there was always a junior around, carrying the phrase, "Let me try!"

Junior year was the year to prepare the class as the leaders of school spirit and accomplishment which is a main factor in becoming a good senior class.

Already aquainted with the Maur Hill "system" the sophomore class returned to school ready to face new responsibilities and prepare for future leadership.

This year, the challenge began with the building of the Homecoming bonfire. Throughout the year, more sophomores participated in school activities than ever before.

The sophomores finally grew up. They had to. They're going to Maur Hill.

There is one characteristic of all freshmen students, each one is at once caught in a maze of confrontations. Freshman year is a hard year. It's a time to win friendship and gain acceptance by the other students. It's a time to learn about high school and how to make a grade. It's a time when boys become men.

This year, Howard Hall replaced the "old dorm." Despite having private rooms, the freshman class quickly adjusted and became a unified class, adding their own share of school spirit to Maur Hill.

Sweet

Paths are made to connect one particular point to another. Traffic from both ends meet and because of this traveling, each side is in better communication with each other.

This year, The Mount built their own school building. Symbolic of linking these two institutions together is a ribbon of cement. But that sidewalk path not only connects Maur Hill and The Mount physically, it shows the beginning of true "unity."

There is already a change this year. Never has The Mount and Maur Hill cooperated as much as today. Never has there been as much spirit at games.

Now, one can see fleeting glimpses of the "prep school of the future."

Two years ago as freshmen, an adjustment to a new way of life began, and some of the best years of living were on the way. It was then said that the freshmen would be the last class to know the two mounts -- a familiar claim which was unfulfilled.

As sophomores the class dealt with all major tasks of the year with spirit and enthusiasm. The help of a relations committee with Maur Hill smoothed the rough spots of social life.

Today the juniors are definitely a class of split memories -- one of old events, one of new happenings. Seeing equal years at both academy locations, they can best judge attitudes, facilities, faculties, and memories. But this mid high school shift has cracked neither the class spirit or the love for the number '72. Instead the past and present and future melt together into one harmonious whole.

If high school memories are as precious as older people say they are, the sophomore class is doubly blessed. These chosen ones will be the youngest to tell about the experiences of the old academy.

They will reminisce the trek up the three flights of stairs, the lunch trip to Riccardi and sandwiches on third floor, Homerooms 403 and 404, Mass in St. Scholastica Chapel, the bookstore where you bought candy, the third floor before it became fourth floor, and the mixers in Room 400.

They will also remember the moving to the new academy, days without clocks and bells and the P A system, the hot lunch program before the lunches were hot, and the sodding of the muddy lawn.

With the dedication of the new building by Archbishop Ignatius Strecker on September 23, memories began to center around routine events.

Beginning high school is one of life's great experiences. But beginning your freshman year in a new school on a new campus is one of life's great adventures. Four years of being the first class to walk on carpets, to experience the modern tone of open classrooms, to feel the air-condition hot days, to know the delight of a hot lunch program, to attend Mass in the Maur Hill chapel belongs only to the class of '74.

These firsts add up to a great spirit. Even a small class would make its pride felt. But the class of '74 adds quantity to quality. With the strength of its seventy members, the freshman class began its high school career with a determination to continue building on the foundation of spirit and scholarship laid in the year 1970-1971.

Now that Maur Hill and the Mount have joined together on the same campus, social relations have improved and will improve more as the years go by.

To have good relations you have to have a united school not two divided schools. This idea is almost becoming a reality on the Maur Hill campus. As a famous Maurite once said, "United we stand, divided we fall."

homecoming queen

Queen Nancy McCarthy

Miss Nancy McCarthy who was selected homecoming queen this year has received little publicity or acknowledgement in her achievement of such an honored position. The vivacious young lady was chosen because of her beauty and charming personality. She was the student's choice, and a well deserving choice, even though she might have felt embarrassed. Her selection was meant as the highest form of compliment a high school girl could receive.

When a person is honored to be a recipient of a high position like this, it is common belief almost that a swelled head might result. On the contrary, the outcome is often the complete opposite, for it is hard for a person to take the responsibility of being pointed out as better than the rest of his or her peers. Such a person would gladly surrender the esteem rather than lose one friend through jealousy that might arise.

Nancy was picked because she was well liked, yet in choosing her, it could have been the harshest thing a friend could do. Luckily in this situation the conflict was avoided. The students at Maur Hill and Mount St. Scholastica have the uncommon ability of being true to their friends and respecting their enemies. This learned, if nothing else, would make all the bad times worth while.

Cissy just told Nancy what a touchdown is.

The third annual Sadie Hawkins Dance proved to be as successful as last years. People pulled on their longjohns, pajamas and really made a night of it. The festivities were held in the old gym at Maur Hill and the music was provided by our boys in the band, Nirvana. The highlight of the evening came when Ed the head Havey was crowned "King of the Dogpatch" and reigned over dogs and patch for the remainder of the dance. A skit was performed by certain members of the Mount's student body which will not be commented on at the present time.

band and the dances

All who are a part of the two communities represented within this yearbook know the part played on the social scene by the dances held throughout the year.

As the seniors of 71 pass through the portals of graduation, with them goes the best band Maur Hill has ever had.

It is the band, Nirvana, consisting of Ho Young Kim, Tom LeCluyse, Kenny Sphire, Bernie Headley, and Mike Fitzpatrick. For three years this group has provided Maur Hill and the Mount with entertainment after countless football and basketball games and on many other occasions that have called for their services. They have never failed to please the crowd of foot-loose students waiting to work up a sweat on the dance floor.

Besides playing dances the members of the group have provided Maur Hill with guitar Masses and have made several other appearances with their acoustical equipment to provide a soothing sound.

Nirvana shows why it pays to go to a Maurite Mixer.

Without an Advertisement section, in the situation in which we live, our yearbook would be impossible.

That is why we extend our thanks to the town and all the people who live in it.

As freshmen, Maur Hill boarders have a tendency to go home regulary. But as the years progress and they become juniors and seniors, their parents practically seem to have to bribe them to come home. The reason for this is that they have found that hidden something which this town possesses. Although there are no seemingly high class social activities to partake in, which you might find in a larger city. There always seems to be something to do and someway to have fun. For this we would like to extend our thanks again to the city of Atchison.

ST. BENEDICT'S

MOUNT ST. SCHOLASTICA

For several years St. Benedict's and Mount St. Scholastica have had a cooperative program. By Fall 1971 the colleges will function as one institution with one completely integrated program on two co-educational campuses. About 1½ miles apart, on either side of Atchison, Kan., a town of 12,000, the campuses are served by a college-run bus system.

The colleges are Catholic, administered by Benedictine priests and nuns, with just over 50 per cent lay faculty. They are liberal arts colleges, introducing every student to a broad spectrum of disciplines. And they are resident colleges primarily, with 80 to 90 percent of the students living on the campuses.

Expected enrollment for Fall 1971 is between 1400 and 1500 students. The student faculty ratio is 14 to 1.
